

Changing the World

"Divine assistance is promised to all those who arise to serve humankind in response to the galvanizing call of Bahá'u'lláh." —Bahá'í Writings

Ready to help change the world? Around the globe, Bahá'ís invite kids of all faiths to gather for study and service. In cities, towns, and villages, kids ages 12–15 join junior youth groups. Along with mentors, they study workbooks, do art, and play games. It's a fun way to explore your spiritual self and learn new skills.

Kids in each group decide what their community needs are—then they put their skills into action. Some pick up trash, visit senior centers, collect donations, create inspiring videos, or make lunches for the homeless. In Katuyola, Zambia, where deforestation is a big problem, kids and youth started planting trees to help the environment. The project grew, and the whole community got involved.

Kids of any age can help others. You can make a big difference with your strengths—like creativity, energy, and optimism. You can even start your own group. Grab some friends, make a plan, and get started!

ZAMBIA IS A SAFARI WONDERLAND. WE HAVE ELEPHANTS, RHINOS, LEOPARDS, CROCODILES, MONKEYS, AND AT LEAST 740 SPECIES OF BIRDS!

WE STARTED A COOL TREE-PLANTING PROJECT—WILL YOU HELP? UNSCRAMBLE THE LETTERS TO SPELL WORDS ABOUT HELPFULNESS.
