

Materialistic Monster Mayhem

In movies, TV, or even real life, do you see people who seem to get everything they want? They have tons of cool clothes and gadgets. They ride in expensive cars or take luxurious vacations. You might hear the jealousy monster growling, "It's not fair!"

If you compare your family to others, you'll always find people who own more stuff than you. But focusing on possessions can lead to sadness. Your true wealth is in the love, laughter, and unity you share with family and friends.

The ads all around us can make us crave stuff that's newer, better, and more expensive. Focus on fun that really lasts—like hanging out with people you love, being in nature, or creating art. When you appreciate your real treasures, you can scare away the monsters of materialism.

Help these monsters choose moderation over the madness of wanting more. Look for words going forward, backward, up, down, and diagonally.
