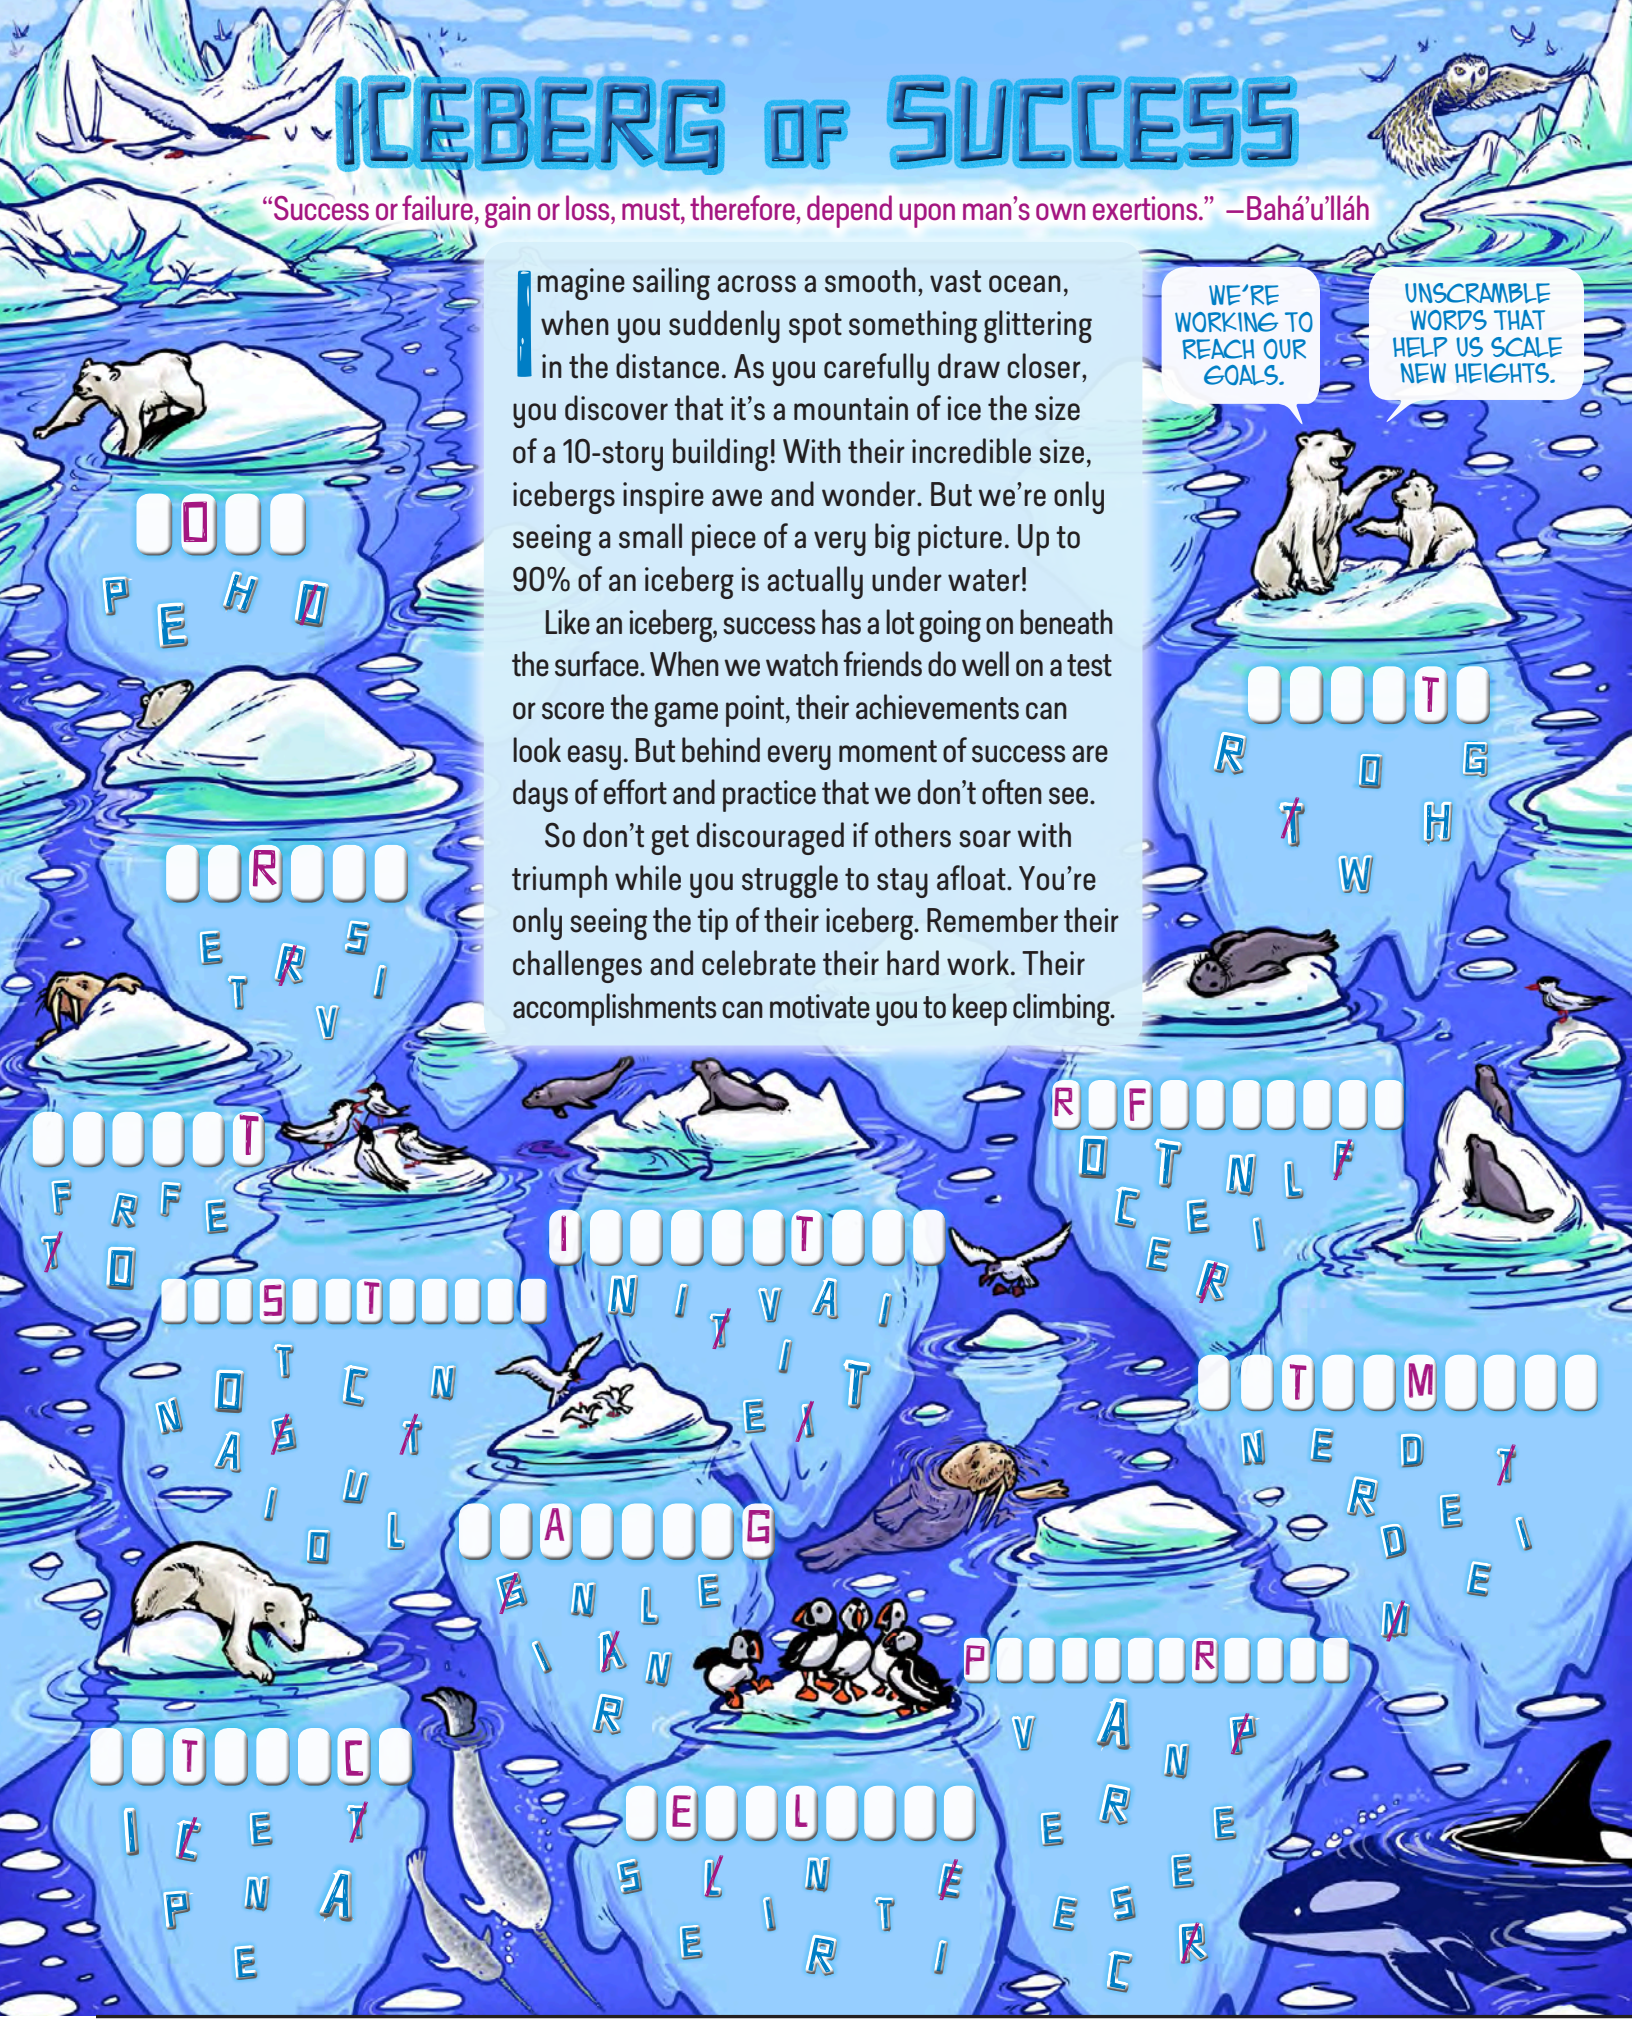
ICEBERG OF SUCCESS

"Success or failure, gain or loss, must, therefore, depend upon man's own exertions." —Bahá'u'lláh

Imagine sailing across a smooth, vast ocean, when you suddenly spot something glittering in the distance. As you carefully draw closer, you discover that it's a mountain of ice the size of a 10-story building! With their incredible size, icebergs inspire awe and wonder. But we're only seeing a small piece of a very big picture. Up to 90% of an iceberg is actually under water!

Like an iceberg, success has a lot going on beneath the surface. When we watch friends do well on a test or score the game point, their achievements can look easy. But behind every moment of success are days of effort and practice that we don't often see.

So don't get discouraged if others soar with triumph while you struggle to stay afloat. You're only seeing the tip of their iceberg. Remember their challenges and celebrate their hard work. Their accomplishments can motivate you to keep climbing.



ANSWERS ON PAGE 28